

College and University During the Pandemic

Colleges and universities—from

Harvard to the 23-campus California State system—have announced that their courses will move online in the fall. Will students pay tens of thousands of dollars in tuition and costs to sit in their basements and Zoom? Are we about to witness a complete reset of the physical vs. online education system? Can the Ivy League maintain its primacy in a post-pandemic world? Will in-person campus hate merely shift to online harassment?
